Work Timeframe: 2002

Services completed: The Phase I Environmental Site Assessment included four components: records review, site reconnaissance, interviews and report preparation. The purpose of the record review was to obtain and review records that helped identify recognized environmental conditions in connection with the project site. The objective of the site reconnaissance, or site visit, was to obtain information by observation that might have indicated the likelihood of identifiable recognized environmental conditions in connection with the project site. The report included documentation to support the analysis, opinions and conclusions determined by the conducting engineers.

The protocol utilized for this assessment was in accordance with the requirements of ASTM E 1527-00.
